Why The Nephilim Matter

by: Kevin C.

There is a long standing tradition of interpreting the Nephilim as the half-breed offspring of fallen angels and human beings. This interpretation was made popular in large part by its appearance in some second century BC Jewish writings¹. Many today accept this interpretation largely based on faulty post exilic Jewish theology and a single argument over of the term 'sons of God' which appears in the book of Job in reference to angels.

Regarding how the angels managed to procreate with humans, why they would want to, and how exactly that would produce a race of gigantic human beings often goes beyond conjecture and far off into the realm of science fiction. This article will attempt to offer an alternate interpretation that places the Nephilim more naturally into the flow of progressive revelation. The argument herein will unfold in five parts that try to answer the following questions first before providing a conclusion on who the Nephilim were and then why it matters whether or not they are half human creatures or fully human.

1. How does the flow and context of Genesis chapter 5 and the concept of firstborn sons inform our understanding of the account in Genesis 6?
2. Does the grammatical structure of Genesis 6:2 point to a biblical theological understanding of sons of God as an elect people of God?
3. What is the great sin being committed by the sons of God in taking the daughters of men as wives?
4. Didn't Peter teach the angelic view of sons of God?
5. Who are the Nephilim really?

The main point of this article is to show that the question of who the Nephilim were actually matters. While it is not a central gospel issue and certainly not an issue from which believers who differ should break fellowship. It still has bearing on the Christian life, mostly because the way in which we try to answer such a question will reveal the hermeneutics or principles by which we approach and seek to interpret the Scripture. To believe that the Nephilim were somehow the offspring of angelic and human sexual unions, serves as more of a distraction away from the major themes of Scripture which all center on the person and work of Jesus Christ. Any hermeneutic or exegesis that takes us down such rabbit trails with no gospel application does harm to the church. The redemptive historical, canonical interpretation I provide seeks to allow Scripture to interpret Scripture and in such a way as to connect the pertinent texts involved with the broader themes in scripture which undergird, beautify, and point us to the good news of Jesus Christ. The argument for why the Nephilim matter is really an argument for why redemptive historical, canonical hermeneutics matter.

It is important to note from the onset that in chapter 5 of Genesis we do not have a complete and exhaustive genealogy of every person born after Adam. Rather it is highlighting the
